Discuss IT Topic: Some of you may or may not have heard of Edward Snowden. Take a few minutes and look up what this person has done to expose government spying/eavesdropping using technology on ordinary citizens? Do you think he should be given a medal of honor or should he be held accountable for his actions? Who should be considered the guilty party?

Response: Please make sure all grammar, spelling, indentation, and punctuation is correct.

If you see in the perspective of all the people in the U.S., our privacy should be respected and not violated by anybody not even the NSA. Edgar should be awarded for the good he has done for exposing all the bad and reckless things the NSA has done with our private information, the NSA was taking information that wasn't even terrorist related. He should be honored and should be respected for what he has done. He has helped us see what the NSA has done while they said they were accessing information so they could spot terrorist possibilities.

If you look in the way how he violated and went against his contract from the NSA he should be arrested for breaking the law and for copying federal information. He has been on the run for a long time and he should face the consequences of what he's done. He has gone against the government and has been hiding for too long. Though he has broken the law and has been in hiding for a long time he has exposed the NSA for what it really is and what things they do with our information. As far as this goes he shouldn't be arrested for a crime that should be in his case something to be honored about. He will hopefully one day be awarded for doing the right thing.
